NEUTRALITY - ENGLISH AND AME-RICAN.

It is well known to those who have followed the course of the discussions in the English Parfiament concerning the violations of British neutrailty that the Attorney-General, after being driven to admit the remissness of the Government in the matter of the Moleona and other "ugle-Rebel pirates, fell back upon American ants as a justification of English unfriend-se to this country. The argument passed for a good one with those who were ignorant of the cases cited by the Attorney-General, and who supposed that he would not venture to misrepresent the force and effect of judicial decisions and opinions. It was reserved for an American lawyer to expose the fallacles of the English. Mr. George Bemis, o Besten, has collected a summary of the case leading on the point, under the fittle "Precedent of American Neutrality," and with abundun learning and a professional actitioness that Sir Reundell Palmer sell admire while he winnes under it, has Bustrated and re-established the true American doctrine.

The vessel in question was the Georgia, which was built at Dumbarton on the Clyde, went to sea with a Liverpool crew shipped nominally for Shanghae, received her armament off the coast of rance, and stafted on her piratical crame while makered at Liverpool as the property of a Liver pool merchant, and so continuing for nearly three onths, during which she was buring American Subsequently the vessel returned to Liver-th siling under the commission of the Rebel goment, and Mr. Baring put the question in ment whether it consisted with the Minis-try's views of neutrality to permit her to enter and remain in a British port.

The Attorney General replied in substance that her commission from a Power which England and recognized as beligerent, estopped an in-quily into the circumstances of her ontit, and that the United States "never adopted the pracce of inquiring into the previous history of inthe street of war which labored nuder the suspicion or allegation of having been fitted out in their ports in violation of their neutrality." And the cited the cases of the Santissima Trimidad and the Cassius, quoting therefrom a dictum of Mr. Justice Story, and summarizing the two in the tatement that "the Santissima Trimidad and the Cassius were both received into the ports of the Dilted States, held not to be amenable to courts of law, and never ordered by the Government to leave any port."

But there happens to be complete documentary.

But there happens to be complete documentary history of the career of these vessels, and the facts are so unlike the Attorney-General's statement that the charitable will presume he was only ignorant of what he undertook to aver. A despatch from Mr. Pickering, American Secretary of State, to Mr. Pinckney, American Minister to the French Republic, dated January 16, 1797, recites that the Cassius, under the name 16, 1797, recites that the Cassins, under the name of Les Jumeaux, was illegally fitted out in Phila-delphia, escaped from that port, and evaded an attempt to stop her by the militia of Delaware, under orders from Washington.

The agent, however, by whom she had been fitted out, was tried for the offence, convicted, and senvenced to fine and imprisonment. Nor did the efforts of the Government cease with the escape of the vessel. A circular was issued by the Secretary of War to the Governors of the maristime States, setting forth that the Cassius—or Les Jumeaux—had gone to sea, and might be expected to return to some American port to com-plete her equipment, and directing her seizure, and the arrest or the captain, officers, and men. But warned of this circular, the Cassius went to a French port in St. Domingo, was sold to the French Government, put in commission, and then returned to Philadelphia with all the au-thority of a regular ship-of-war of the French Government. Still she was not deemed exempt from hostile proceedings. Suits were begun against the vessel, the captain arrested, the suits tried in the Federal Courts, sustained by the Executive authority, and "a final condemnation of forfeiture in a 'qui tam' suit was pronounced, and (we have no doubt) enforced under national auspices."

The French Minister complained bitterly of these proceedings, and the American Government was deemed to have gone to the verge even of war with France, in order to enforce its neu trality, and protect British commerce from French privateers fitted out in American ports If England had acted in such a spirit, with anything like the same good faith, and without any risk to herself, as in the case of the Alabama and Georgia *he might have done, is it possible to conceive that either of those vessels would have been permitted to leave a British port, or to re-The only possible question in the Cassias case is whether the forfeiture was actually enforced nor can there be a reasonable doubt on that poin in view or the concurring testimony of three Judges of the Supreme Court, one of whom was Chief Justice Marshad. But on that, and on the merits of the whole matter, Mr. Bemis thus forci-

by sums up:—

"If, perchance, any doubt hangs over the final result of the suit for a forfoliure, all *e have to say is that we small be content to have the Eritish nation and towards the Georgia, and all that tribo, in the spirit of the Gassiar procedent-leaving out the forfoliure. When the British dove ament have sent an armed force so prevent the escape of another Georgia as ocen as they are informed of such an expedition being madicated in their sorts; when they have indeed, convicted, and crustage her builders and computers, in case she was escaped; when they have sent orders to all the ports of the British Empire to seize her, in case she makes her appearance again before going into a Confederate part to procure a legitimate transfer and a maticinal commission; which, after having fortheir heresit with a (so called) national character, and having anoth come within British jurisdiction, they shall have upueld and justified shot and penal proceedings mains her at the orige of a war with as powerful a maticin as France, and which proceedings which have detained her till sile rots at the wharf, and is attandoned in disease by lar helitagrant equippers—for one, we shall be part the precedent of the Gassias drawn orth sight from the file as an arrow from the quirey of an enum."

Concerning the Santissima Trimidad case we

Concerning the Santissima Trinidad case we have only space to say that Mr. Bemis' exposi-tion of it is equally satisfactory with that of the tion of it is equally satisfactory with that of the Cassies, and equally fail to the claim of the English Attorney-General, whether in respect of familiarity with the learning of his profession or justice to the country which he assails. The pamphlet before us contains the results of far wider research than we are able to indicate in this article, and we commend it as a whole to the study of Sir Roundwell Palmer, or of the next English lawyer who attempts to build a defense of English injustice on American procedents which do not exist.

DRAFT A DECISIVE NOLUTION.

The progress of the war has vastly simplified its operation. Instead of being waged in detail at a mult sude of points along border lines and coust lines, with intervals of hundreds, and even thousands of miles, it now is made to bear abnost exclusively upon two positions-Richmond and Atlanta-the one recognized to be the key to the northeastern, the other to the southwestern portion of the "Confederacy."

If these places are captured and the armies which defend them are compelled to surrender, an end at once is made of the Rebellion, for the Rebels have no other forces numerous enough to make any stand, and no remaining able-bodied population from which to raise such forces. If the places are captured and the Robel armies escape, these armies, in order to save their com-munications, will be compelled to fall back into the southeastern portion of the "Confederacy," embracing North Carolina, South Carolina, and perhaps the eastern third of Georgia.

Cooped up into this narrow compass, they will be beleagured on all sides by the national armies. When it once comes to that, there can be but one result, and that not long delayed. The Rebel armies may fortify themselves ever so improvement, they may keef the national armies at Rebel armies may fortify themselves ever so impregnably, they may keep the national armies at lay ever so completely, they will yet find it impossible to supply themselves from the arable ground within that limited region, with their necessary subsistence. There are no two States east of the Mississippi—Florida excepted, yet almost an unbroken widerness—whose cultivated soft bears so small a proportion to the area of the State as North Carolina and South Carolina.

There are no two States with that exception.

State as North Carolina and South Carolina.

There are no two States, with that exception, so extensively covered by pine barrens and swamps. It is not a natural possibility for them to furnish, in addition to their own home necessities, a quarter of the subsistence that would be required by the two great Rebel armies, if once forced back into their limits. Even were not a gun fired on our side in assault, the question of the surrender of Lee and Johnston would be simply a question of months. The war will be vitrually settled from the day the national armies close in upon them, on or near the line of the Savannah river on the one side, and on the line stretching west from the Albemarle Sound on the stretching west from the Albemarie Sound on the

The really decisive work, then, is the capturing of Richmond and Atlanta. The accomplishment of Richmond and Atlanta. The accomplishment of this, in each case, is attended with peculiar difficulties, and also peculiar facilities. In the case of Richmond there is an embarrassing necessity of operating as to give the Rebel commander no opportunity to detach a sufficient force to obtain possession of Baltimore and Washington. But on the other hand is the advantage of a direct water communication to the base of signessive operations.

It is not possible for the Hebels to interfere in It is not possible for the Hetiels to interfere in any degree with the regular supplies of General Grants army. Again, an advanced position south of Petersburg has already been secured, from which the Rebola have no power to distinge usa position which will alike serve General Grant either as a point d'appus for a combination of active aggressive movements in full force, or a a accure suchet for the cavalry arm in operating against the two rails adds upon which sione Lees army has your failed on the accure such as a constant of the cavalry arm in operating my has now to depend for the conveyance of supplies. In the case of Atlanta, our army has the pecu-llar disadventage of being obliged to protect its own extended line of supplies—a line of not less than one hundred and twenty miles to Chara-nouga, its secondary base, and running through a cambry of thick forests, and of municerable decountry of thick forests, and of munimerable de-files, whick give great facilities for secret and sudden attack. But, on the other hand, General Sherman, after weeks of splendid strategy and fighting, has succeeded in bringing his army in-position close upon Atlanta, and the conforma-tion of the ground in its vicinity is such as to ad-mit of no effective fortifying. If General Sher-man can keep his line of supply clear, he will, to all appearance, soon be able either to take Atlanta by direct assault, or to turn it, as he has so many other stronger positions, and compel its evacua-tion.

If this be a correct view of the present military situation, it is evident that to guarantee success, more men are needed in both of our armies. General Grant needs them to prevent a epetition of such Rebel movements into Mure land as that which has just occurred, which night have wrought, though it did not, pro-digious harm. General Sherman needs them to protect his line of communications, the interrupprotect his line of communications, the interrup-tion of which for any continued period would oblige him to retreat, and might even produce the destruction of his army. It is not necessary that veteran troops should be used to any great extent for either of these purposes.

Properly officered, and with proper protective works at the right positions, the greater part of the force necessary to held the valley of the Shenaudoah in Northern Virginia and the line of the railroad in Northern Georgia, might as well consist of short-term recruiss. Were they suffi-ciently numerous, no such thorough discipline ciently numerous, no such thorough discipline would be necessary for their defensive work, as is requisite when one of the grand armies is pitted in the broad field against the other.

As a fixed military policy, short terms of service are not advantageous, but perhaps in the management of this war, thus far, a mistake has been committed in confining enlistments too much to the long period of three years. The great difficulty of obtaining recruits in sufficient numbers has come from this cause. Tens of thousands, we believe, in fact, hundreds of thousands, would promptly enough have volunteered for six months, or even nine or twelve months, who felt it too great a sucrifice to leave their business and their families for three years.

Had they been called upon for the short period, they would have relieved the veterans of a vast deal of work and care, exterior to the main camiently numerous, no such thorough discipline deal of work and care, exterior to the main cam-paign lines, and have greatly promoted concen-tration. As a reserve, too, they could have done effective fighting. There is good reason to believe that Gettysburg, the most momentons battle that that Gettysburg, the most momentons battle that has yet been fought, might have been lost to us had it not been for the numbers of nine mouths men who were among the combatants; and the West-ern hundred days' men now in General Ster-man's advance, have been warmly complimented by the old general officers for the vigor and effi-ciency of their assaults.

Under the terrible baptism of fire and blood, the American bowever increasing or orderly the American, however inexperienced, quickly becomes a good soldier. Three years enlistments ought to be kept up with an activity sufficient to make good to the veteran regiments the heavy losses which they have sustained since the present losses which they have sustained since the present campaign opened, and to fill the places of those whose terms are expiring. Beyond that, we believe that all effort should be confined to the raising of men for more limited periods.

Probably it is not too much to say that it would be easier to procure four or five men for twelve months service than one for three years service. Insanuch as one of the former is about service. Instance as one of the former is about as good as the latter for guard duty and many other sorts of service, secondary and yet none the less necessary, the enlisting for short terms, to meet the new call, will serve every practical purpose of the Government, and at the same time enable every State, we trust, to make up its quota by volunteering, instead of the compulsory draft.
